

and dedicated in November 1896, at a total cost of slightly more than $2500 and at that time was nearly debt-free. On March 8, 1903, 32 people met in the chapel and organized themselves into what has since been known as the Ridgewood Baptist Church. During that March, a church covenant was adopted, a baptistry was built and the Plano Baptist Church donated their old church pews. Out of this humble beginning, Ridgewood Baptist Church emerged.

The Church has grown in many ways since its humble beginnings. Today, around 300 people attend services at Ridgewood Baptist Church. In 1974, the Church opened its doors to their new school, Ridgewood Baptist Academy. Reverend Albert Baker is the current pastor of the Church. Reverend Baker's vision for the church is to have more land for the sports programs at the school. He also desires spiritual growth for his people and a desire to share their worship with others.

Mr. Speaker, I urge this body to identify and recognize other groups in their own districts whose actions have so greatly benefitted and strengthened America's families and communities.

JAPANESE AMERICANS

HON. MICHAEL M. HONDA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 6, 2003

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, one of the most concise rebuttals that I have read to the notion that Japanese Americans were placed in the camps because they either posed a national security threat or for their own safety comes from a law professor from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill in a letter dated February 7, 2003. I would like to submit this letter at this point in the Record.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHAPEL HILL

Chapel Hill, North Carolina, February 7, 2003.

Hon. HOWARD COBLE,

U.S. House of Representatives, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE COBLE: I am a professor of law at the University of North Carolina School of Law in Chapel Hill. My areas of expertise include constitutional law and especially the story of the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II. My book on the subject, Free to Die for their Country: The Story of the Japanese American Draft Resisters in World War II (Univ. of Chicago Press, 2001), was named one of the Washington Post's Top Nonfiction Titles for 2001.

I have followed with interest and concern the story about your comments on the radio on Tuesday morning to the effect that you support the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II, and that the Roosevelt administration interned Japanese Americans to protect them.

I note that you were quoted in the High Point Enterprise as saying the following: "I still stand by what I said . . . that, in no small part, it (internment) was done to protect the Japanese-Americans themselves." The article further states that you said that if it were proven to you that protecting Japanese Americans was not one of FDR's motivations, you will apologize.

Here is the proof.

Just after the Pearl Harbor attack, FDR, asked Navy Secretary Frank Knox to investigate the possibility, that Fifth Column work by people of Japanese ancestry in Hawaii had contributed to the success of the Japanese sneak attack. Knox reported his conclusions to FDR by December 15, and on that day, said to reporters that he thought "the most effective Fifth Column work of the entire war was done in Hawaii with the possible exception of Norway." J. Edgar Hoover immediately registered his strong disagreement with Knox's conclusions, and it turns out that Knox was wrong and Hoover was right. But it was Knox's views that were made public, and they triggered hysteria on the West Coast.

Well before the war, FDR, anticipating a possible war with Japan, had commissioned his own secret intelligence investigation of Japanese aliens and their loyalties. Leading this effort were John Franklin Carter (an author and columnist) and Curtis Munson (a prominent Republican businessman). And the Office of Naval Intelligence ("ONI") and the FBI were for quite some time before Pearl Harbor, gathering names of Japanese aliens who might need to be apprehended in the event of war. ONI and the FBI actually compiled a list of such aliens which came to be called the "ABC" list—so named because the list presented three categories (Category A, Category B, and Category C) of potentially dangerous aliens. (In the days after Pearl Harbor, all of the aliens in these three categories were in fact arrested—a total of some 1500.)

Carter and Munson's investigations had led them to conclude that the overwhelming majority of Japanese aliens and an even greater percentage of American citizens of Japanese ancestry were in fact loyal to the United States, and that of those whose loyalty was even questionable, few could be expected even to consider actually doing something to support Japan or undermine the United States. Carter and Munson grew alarmed by Knox's report and the anti-Japanese outcry that followed it.

Carter and Munson quickly put together a plan for FDR's consideration that was designed to bolster the Japanese American communities of Hawaii and the West Coast. Their plan called for a number of things: FDR was urged to go on record as believing in the loyalty of American citizens of Japanese ancestry (the "Nisei"). The Nisei should be invited to volunteer (and then should be accepted) for patriotic service in the Red Cross and civilian defense. The Nisei should be encouraged to take control of their alien parents' property. Once investigated, the Nisei should be allowed to take jobs in defense plants. Carter and Munson also urged the government to work closely with the Japanese American Citizens League, which had indicated its willingness to serve as a loyal liaison with the Japanese American community.

The goals of the Carter-Munson plan were many, but they included the discouragement of vigilante violence against Japanese Americans and Japanese aliens. The hope was that if FDR came out quickly and loudly in support of people of Japanese ancestry, and involved them quickly in activities that would permit their loyalty and patriotism to shine through, others would not see them as a threat.

The Carter-Munson plan was submitted to Roosevelt before Christmas. By mid-January, it was completely forgotten—suspended by other pressures that I'll detail in a moment. And here's the important point: the Carter-Munson plan was the only plan for dealing with Japanese Americans that took their security into account in any way. It never got off the ground.

Why didn't it get off the ground? For four main reasons.

First, by late January 1942, General John DeWitt (the commanding officer of the West Coast Defense Command) and his advisor Karl Bendetsen had become persuaded that mass action to remove all people of Japanese ancestry from the West Coast was necessary for military reasons. Their viewpoint was fed largely by outrageous rumors of Japanese American subversion, none of which ever panned out.

Second, by mid-January, a rabidly racist press along the Coast had begun campaigning for the eviction of all "Japs" from the area—not for their protection, but because they could not be trusted.
